EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Advertising

The Government of Canada advertisement, Lest We Forget vignette, ran in the two weeks leading up to Remembrance Day. It was proven successful in gaining the attention of Canadians. Results indicate that six in ten (60 per cent) Canadians said “yes” or “maybe” when asked if over the past few weeks or so, they have seen, read or heard any advertising about Canadian Veterans. Of those who recalled advertising of this nature 61 per cent were able to accurately recall facets of the Lest We Forget vignette (which accounts for 37 per cent on the base of all Canadians).

Among all individuals who claimed to recall the advertising about Canadian Veterans, most recall television as the source (71 per cent), although another third recall advertising in newspapers. For those who have seen the advertisement, one-quarter indicate they have done something as a result of the ad. Nearly half (47 per cent) said that the ad helped to generate interest, or that they have researched, or actively looked for items relating to the Wars and Remembrance Day. Seventeen per cent attended a ceremony/parade, and a further 12 per cent talked with friends or family about Remembrance Day and Veterans.

Results show that nearly six in ten (58 per cent) Canadians participated in Remembrance Day Activities this year, of those who participated a lofty 68 per cent recalled advertising about Canadian Veterans. This participation can include personally attending, watching, or listening to any part of a Remembrance Day ceremony.

A high proportion of those recognizing the advertisement associate it with the Government of Canada. Of those who recall seeing the Lest We Forget vignette, over half (54 per cent) felt that it was produced and paid for by the Government of Canada.

Government of Canada Performance, Image and Impact on Remembrance

Ratings of the Government of Canada’s performance is high with roughly half of Canadians (47 to 49 per cent) providing a positive rating on promotion of knowledge, awareness and engagement, provision of information about available services, and overall performance.

Along with performance, Government of Canada image was also tested, which yielded largely positive results. The Government of Canada scored highest on respectful service delivery, followed by reliability of service and information, innovation in its method of providing information and services to citizens and ease of contact for information and service. These avenues of service delivery were rated by agreement or disagreement with attitudinal statements.

The government of Canada is seen as having an impact on Remembrance activities in a number of ways; chief among them is increasing Canadians' awareness of Remembrance Day and acts of remembering. This is followed closely by increasing the scope of Remembrance Day to include the representation of young Canadian soldiers who have served in modern conflicts.

Support of Government Funding for Remembrance and Commemorative Activities

A very high proportion of Canadians (87 per cent) know that the Government of Canada is involved in remembrance and commemorative activities relating to Canadian Veterans. A majority of Canadians are supportive of this use of public funds, even when asked to consider that public dollars must typically be stretched to accommodate a range of issues and activities. Overall, six in ten (60 per cent) Canadians indicated support for the Government of Canada's involvement in remembrance activities among Canadians. Among Canadians who are supportive of this use of tax dollars, more report having seen recent advertising than not (to the tune of nearly two to one).

Attitudes towards Remembrance

Attitudes of Canadians regarding remembrance are mixed with nearly six in ten (59 per cent) who believe that the involvement of Canadian soldiers and the sacrifices they have made should be remembered throughout the year, while the remaining four in ten (38 per cent) feel that a single big event is a good way to focus attention on Canadian Veterans and all that they have done. Among Canadians who recently saw advertising about Canadian Veterans nearly twice as many believe in year round remembrance compared to one single event. A larger difference is seen in the view of Canadians regarding the focus of remembrance. Two-thirds (67 per cent) believe that the act of remembering should include all of those involved, including the family and friends of soldiers, as well as others involved in the conflict, compared to one-third (31 per cent) who feel that we should focus primarily on the soldiers themselves as they have had the most direct involvement and paid the largest price. Among those who recently saw advertising about Canadian Veterans this proportion is mirrored.

SOMMAIRE

La publicité

Le gouvernement du Canada a fait paraître sa capsule commémorative intitulée N'oublions jamais au cours des deux semaines précédant le Jour du Souvenir. Cette publicité a bel et bien attiré l'attention des Canadiens et Canadiennes. Six personnes interrogées sur dix (60 p. 100) ont répondu par «oui» ou «peut-être» à la question de savoir si elles avaient, au cours des dernières semaines, vu, lu ou entendu de la publicité au sujet des anciens combattants canadiens. Parmi celles qui se souvenaient d'une publicité de cette nature, 61 p. 100 ont pu mentionner correctement certains aspects de la capsule commémorative N'oublions jamais (ce qui représente 37 p. 100 de l'ensemble des Canadiens).

Parmi les répondants qui disent se souvenir d'une publicité au sujet des anciens combattants canadiens, la plupart en donnent comme source la télévision (71 p. 100), bien qu'ils soient un autre tiers à se souvenir de l'avoir vue dans un journal. Parmi les répondants qui ont vu cette publicité, le quart affirment avoir fait quelque chose par la suite. Ils sont près de la moitié (47 p. 100) à dire que l'annonce a contribué à susciter chez eux de l'intérêt ou qu'elle les a incités à faire de la recherche ou à chercher activement des choses associées aux guerres et au Jour du Souvenir. Ils sont 17 p. 100 à avoir assisté à une cérémonie ou à un défilé, tandis que 12 p. 100 encore ont parlé avec des amis ou de la famille du Jour du Souvenir et des anciens combattants.

D'après les résultats, près de six Canadiens sur dix (58 p. 100) ont participé cette année à des activités du Jour du Souvenir, et on note jusqu'à 68 p. 100 de ces personnes qui se souviennent d'une publicité au sujet des anciens combattants canadiens. La participation consistait, notamment, à assister en personne à une cérémonie du Jour du Souvenir ou bien à regarder ou à écouter une partie de sa retransmission.

Une forte proportion de ceux qui ont reconnu la publicité l'associent au gouvernement du Canada. Parmi ceux qui se souviennent d'avoir vu la capsule commémorative N'oublions jamais, plus de la moitié (54 p. 100) ont pensé qu'elle était produite et payée par le gouvernement du Canada.

Le rendement du gouvernement du Canada, son image et son incidence sur le souvenir

Le rendement du gouvernement du Canada est jugé favorablement. En effet, près de la moitié des Canadiens (de 47 à 49 p. 100) lui accordent une note positive, dans l'ensemble, de même que pour ce qui est de promouvoir leurs connaissances, leur sensibilisation et leur engagement ainsi que de les informer sur les services disponibles.

Outre son rendement, l'image du gouvernement du Canada a aussi été examinée et jugée en grande partie de manière positive. Le gouvernement du Canada a obtenu ses meilleures notes pour sa façon respectueuse de fournir des services, après quoi viennent la fiabilité de ses services et renseignements, ses moyens innovateurs de procurer des services et des renseignements aux citoyens et la facilité avec laquelle on peut communiquer avec lui pour obtenir des renseignements ou des services. L'évaluation de son mode de prestation de ses services reposait sur le degré d'accord ou de désaccord avec divers énoncés ayant trait à des attitudes.

Diverses façons permettent de vérifier l'incidence que le gouvernement du Canada semble avoir sur les activités du souvenir dont, au premier chef, la sensibilisation de plus en plus grande des Canadiens au Jour du Souvenir et les gestes commémoratifs qu'ils posent. Cette mesure est suivie de près par l'élargissement de la portée du Jour du Souvenir pour y inclure la représentation des jeunes soldats canadiens qui ont combattu lors des conflits modernes.

L'appui accordé au financement gouvernemental des activités commémoratives et du Souvenir Une très forte proportion de Canadiens et de Canadiennes (87 p. 100) savent que le gouvernement du Canada participe aux activités commémoratives et du Souvenir qui concernent les anciens combattants canadiens. Ils sont majoritairement en faveur de cette utilisation des fonds publics, même quand on leur rappelle que l'argent des contribuables doit être réparti entre de nombreux domaines et beaucoup d'activités. Dans l'ensemble, six Canadiens et Canadiennes sur dix (60 p. 100) se montrent en faveur de la participation du gouvernement du Canada aux activités de commémoration entre Canadiens. Les personnes qui sont en faveur de dépenser l'argent des contribuables de cette façon sont plus nombreuses à dire qu'elles ont vu récemment de la publicité plutôt que de ne pas en voir vu (soit un rapport de près de deux à un).

Attitudes en matière de commémoration

Les Canadiens sont partagés quant à leurs attitudes en matière de commémoration, puisque près de six sur dix (59 p. 100) croient qu'on devrait commémorer tout au long de l'année l'engagement des soldats canadiens et les sacrifices qu'ils ont faits, tandis que quatre sur dix (38 p. 100) pensent qu'un seul événement de grande ampleur est une bonne façon d'attirer l'attention sur les anciens combattants canadiens et leurs faits d'armes. Les Canadiens et Canadiennes qui ont vu récemment de la publicité sur les anciens combattants canadiens sont près de deux fois plus nombreux à préférer une commémoration tout au long de l'année à un seul grand événement. La divergence d'opinion est encore plus marquée en ce qui concerne l'objet de la commémoration. Les deux tiers des Canadiens (67 p. 100) sont d'avis que la commémoration doit englober tous les intéressés, y compris la famille et les amis des soldats, de même que ceux qui ont participé aux conflits, alors qu'ils sont le tiers (31 p. 100) à penser qu'il faut se concentrer avant tout sur les soldats eux-mêmes parce que ce sont eux qui ont été engagés le plus directement et qui en ont le plus payé le prix. Cette proportion se reflète parmi ceux qui ont vu récemment de la publicité au sujet des anciens combattants canadiens.

1. INTRODUCTION

Every year around November 11th Canadians across the country gather at cenotaphs and town squares or tune into broadcasts on radio, television and the internet in order to be part of Remembrance Day activities and to contribute to the acknowledgment of Canadian Veterans. This year, leading up to Remembrance Day, the Government of Canada ran a 60-second television vignette titled Lest We Forget. The vignette highlighted Canadian participation during times of war, peace and conflict and was designed to encourage Canadians to remember and honour our Veterans' service. Hoping to build on the heightened awareness of commemorative activities and events following 2005's Year of the Veteran and 2007's Vimy Ridge celebrations the Government of Canada, specifically VAC, released the vignette in support of Veterans Week.

In order to assess the effectiveness of this advertising VAC commissioned EKOS Research Associates to administer the Government of Canada's (GoC) Advertising Campaign Evaluation Tool (ACET), which was developed as a means of providing the GoC with a benchmark measure to consistently evaluate the effectiveness of major advertising campaigns. EKOS Research Associates conducted a telephone survey of the Canadian general public to gauge awareness of the Lest We Forget vignette and determine its effectiveness in influencing Canadians knowledge and support of commemorative activities. The survey also evaluated views on Government of Canada performance, both overall and in providing information to Canadians.

2. METHODOLOGY

In total 1,000 randomly selected Canadians participated in the 11 minute survey which was conducted between November 14 and November 20, 2007, for a response rate of 13.6 percent. The sample was stratified to ensure adequate representation of key population segments (e.g., region, age, gender). The associated margin of error associated with a sample of this size is +/-3.1 per cent, 19 times out of 20. This margin of error increases for population sub-group results.

The data was weighted based on Statistics Canada data (Census 2006) according to age, gender, and region to ensure that the sample is representative of the general public in Canada aged 18 years and over.

3. ADVERTISING

The following chapter addresses the findings related to the advertising vignette, Lest We Forget, produced in support of Veterans Week. To begin, the unprompted recall of advertising is measured. Next the overall aided recall is analyzed where the Lest We Forget advertisement is described and measured along with the source and perceived theme of the advertisement and any influence in behaviour as a result.

3.1 UNPROMPTED RECALL

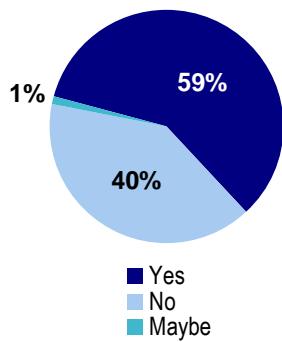

In order to measure the effectiveness of the Government of Canada advertisement placed by Veterans' Affairs Canada in the two weeks leading up to Remembrance Day the standard Advertising Campaign Effectiveness Tool (ACET) was used. This includes first an unprompted recall question in order to determine overall (unprompted) claimed recall. This is followed-up with questions about what the respondent remembers about the ad (e.g., theme/topic, sponsor, media source), providing a more accurate sense of unaided recall. Following the unprompted recall, respondents are then asked about the ad specifically (with a full description read to respondents) in order to ascertain aided recall.

Respondents were asked if, over the past few weeks or so, they have seen, read or heard any advertising about Canadian Veterans. Six in ten Canadians recall some type of advertising about Veterans (although one per cent reported a softer recall "maybe"). Of those who claim to have seen advertising about Canadian Veterans, the most common subject of the advertising is Remembrance Day ceremonies (27 per cent). This is the most difficult response to interpret as respondents may be remembering the ad or they may be remembering media ads about the upcoming coverage of Remembrance Day ceremonies. Symbols of recognition, respect, and remembrance or military are the next most frequent images recalled at 22 per cent. Fifteen per cent of respondents who recall seeing advertising report images of different kinds of soldiers or general pictures of soldiers followed by an additional 12 per cent who recall seeing images of former soldiers, Veterans and the elderly. A variety of other images follow with eight per cent who report recalling fighting, wounded, or dead soldiers in the advertising, along with those who recall soldiers marching, modern soldiers in Afghanistan, or historical imagery or historical events (five per cent each). Of Canadians who recall advertising about Canadian Veterans, 17 per cent can not report any pictures or images from the advertising.

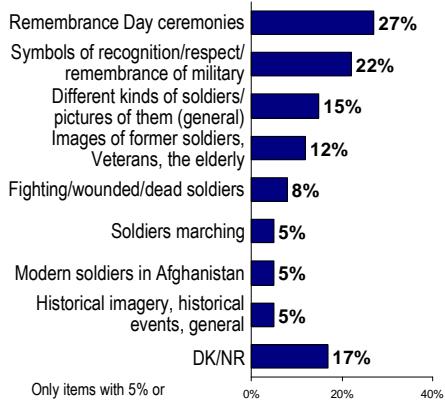

From these results and putting together mentions that accurately describe the vignette, 61 per cent of respondents likely saw the right ad, suggesting that overall roughly 37 per cent of Canadians likely saw and retained some recall of the ad. It is more difficult to determine if the others also saw the Lest We Forget vignette or some other advertisement. Nonetheless, 37 per cent is a high level of unaided recall.

Unprompted Recall of Advertising

"Over the past few weeks or so, have you seen, read or heard any ADVERTISING about Canadian Veterans?"

(IF YES/MAYBE) "Please tell me everything you can remember about this advertisement. What pictures or images come to mind?" [open - multiple mention]

{Base: All Canadians; n=1000}

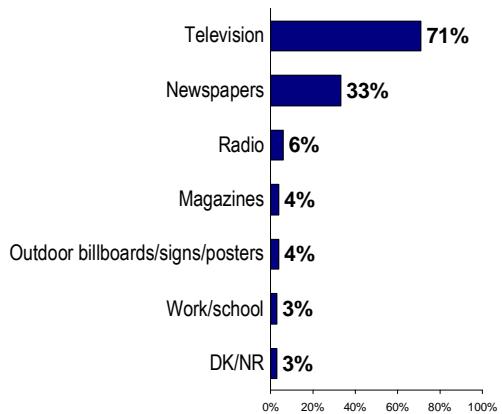

{Base: Recall seeing ad about Canadian Veterans; n=631}

- Overall (claimed) recall is higher among Canadians living in British Columbia, as well as among women and senior citizens (aged 65 or older), relative to the recall rate among other Canadians.
- As might be expected, recall of the ad is also higher among those who are or, know a Veteran, and those who participated in Remembrance Day ceremonies, although it is difficult to know whether the latter is because people who participate in remembrance are more apt to notice and remember such an ad or if the ad itself caused people to participate. Similarly, recall goes up with support for the Government of Canada's role in raising interest in remembrance among Canadians, although, again, the direction of the relationship is unclear.
- Likely reflecting the current divided sentiment in Quebec regarding the war in Afghanistan, Quebecers are more apt to recall seeing images of fighting, wounded, and dead soldiers in the advertising, whereas residents of the rest of Canada are more likely to recall symbols of recognition, respect, and remembrance of military.

Among all individuals who report (claimed) recall of the advertising about Canadian Veterans, most recall television as the source (71 per cent), although another third recall advertising in newspapers. A variety of other settings comprise the balance, including radio (six per cent), magazines (four per cent), outdoor billboards / signs / posters (four per cent), and work or school (three per cent).

Source of (Unprompted) Recall

"Where did you notice this advertisement?" [open - multiple mention]

Only items with 3% or more shown on slide

{Base: Recall seeing ad; n=635}

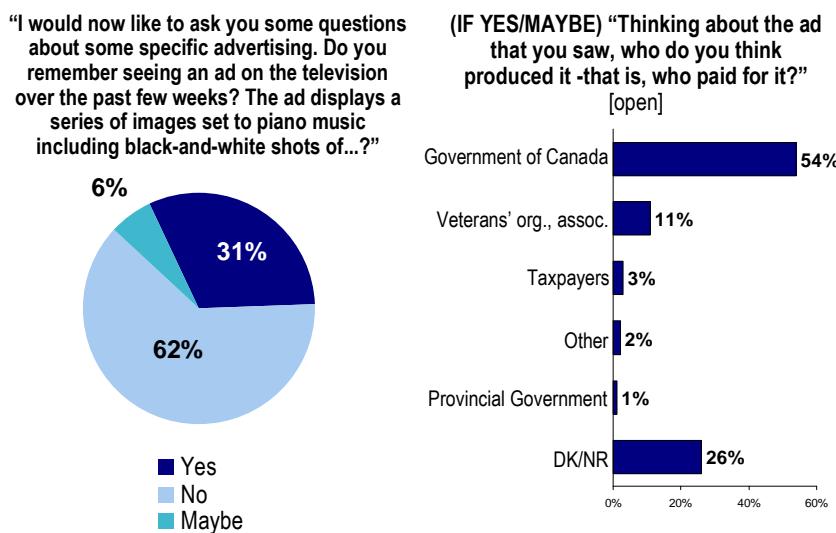

- Television is cited more often as the source among Quebecers, while Canadians living in Saskatchewan or Manitoba are more likely to report newspapers such as the Globe and Mail or National Post as the source.

3.2 PROMPTED RECALL

Respondents then had the ad described to them and were asked if they recalled this particular advertisement in an attempt to measure aided recognition of the ad. Upon hearing the description, one in three (31 per cent) said that they recalled this advertisement on television, with another six per cent who said that they might remember the ad. This finding suggests that many of those who initially claimed recall in the unprompted question were in fact remembering some other advertisement (e.g., media advertising of coverage of upcoming Remembrance Day ceremonies or actual coverage of these ceremonies). This is strengthened by the fact that only 40 per cent of those indicating initial recall of the ad also say that they recognize the described ad, with another eight per cent who say they may recall the described ad (but are not sure). It is difficult to be sure of the actual recall of the ad, however, since the vignette is less of a single story and more of a montage of pictures and themes, perhaps leaving some unsure based on the detailed description, that they have in fact seen this specific advertisement.

A high proportion of those recognizing the advertisement associate it with the Government of Canada. Of those who recall seeing the Lest We Forget vignette, over half (54 per cent) felt that it was produced and paid for by the Government of Canada. Eleven per cent believe the advertisement was produced by Veterans' organizations and associations. A further three per cent insist the television advertisement was paid for by tax payers, two per cent feel that the ad was paid for by other sources such as private corporations, and an additional one per cent believe the ad was paid for by the provincial government. It is instructive to note that one-quarter (26 per cent) of respondents indicate that they do not know who produced the advertisement.

Prompted Recall of the Advertisement & Source

{Base: All Canadians; n=1000}

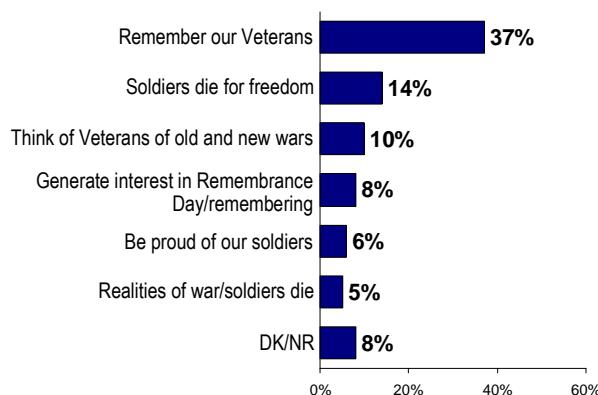

{Base: Recall seeing ad; n=390}

- Ontarians are more apt than those in other regions to recall the advertisement and know that it was produced by the Government of Canada. Those in Quebec are much less likely to recall the advertisement. In fact 57 per cent said that they did not know who produced it. Aided recognition is also lower among youth.
- There is also a positive relationship between recognition of the ad and socioeconomic status (education and household income). Individuals with university education, and those with household income over $100,000, are more likely to believe that the Government of Canada produced the advertisement. The same is true for knowing a Veteran, attending a Remembrance Day ceremony, and support for the Government of Canada's role in raising interest in remembrance among Canadians.

A wide range of salient themes were taken from the advertisement among those who recognized it. The most frequently described was remembrance of Veterans (37 per cent). This is followed by the message that soldiers die for freedom (14 per cent), thinking of Veterans from old and new wars (10 per cent), and generation of a general interest in Remembrance Day and the act of remembrance (eight per cent). Six per cent believe the message to be pride in our soldiers and another five per cent believe the theme to be the realities of war/soldiers die. Relatively few were unable to frame a view about the theme of the advertisement.

Recalled Theme of Advertising

"Thinking about the ad that you saw, what do you think was the MAIN point this advertisement was trying to get across?" [open]

{Base: Recall seeing ad; n=390}

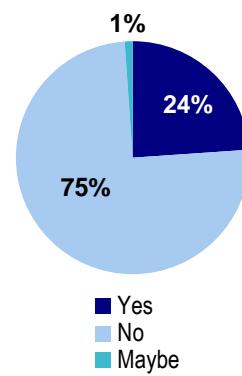

- Women are more apt than men to report the message as remembrance.
- Those in Saskatchewan and Manitoba are more likely to cite the realities of war and that soldiers die as the theme, while Albertans (and to a lesser extent Atlantic Canadians) are more apt to believe that soldiers die for freedom to be the main point of the advertisement.
- Those who know a Veteran are more apt to believe that the theme of the advertisement is Veterans of old and new wars.

A salient finding from the survey is the reported high impact of the advertisement on those who saw it and were familiar enough with it to recognize it. A full one in four (24 per cent) of those who recognize the advertisement report that they did something as a result of seeing it.

Of those who did do something as a result of seeing the advertisement, nearly half (47 per cent) said that the ad helped to generate interest, or that they have researched, or actively looked for items relating to the Wars and Remembrance Day. Seventeen per cent indicate they attended a ceremony/parade, and a further 12 per cent talked with friends or family about Remembrance Day and Veterans. A variety of other actions were reported, including watched or listened to a ceremony on television or radio (nine per cent), participated in other ways such as in community activities (nine per cent), or thought about the wars (eight per cent).

Action Taken As a Result of Ad

"Did you do anything as a result of seeing this ad?"

{Base: Recall the ad; n=390}

- Ontarians are somewhat more apt to report doing something as a result of seeing the advertisement, while this was least often true in Quebec.

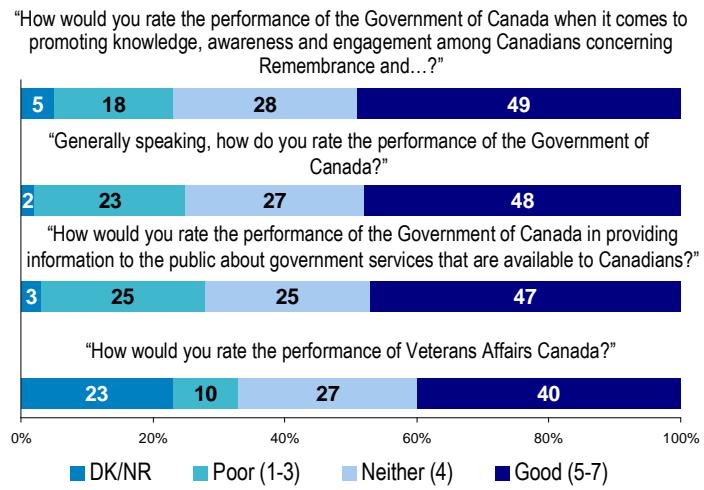

4. RATING THE GOVERNMENT OF CANADA

This section relates to the performance, image, and impact of the Government of Canada's involvement in remembrance. Respondents were told that the television advertisement under study was produced by the Government of Canada. Individuals were then given the opportunity to rate the Government of Canada on several dimensions.

4.1 PERFORMANCE OF THE GOVERNMENT OF CANADA

Four factors were evaluated in terms of the performance of the Government of Canada. Ratings were provided on a 7-point scale, where 1 means terrible, 7 means excellent and the mid-point, 4, means neither good nor bad. Government performance is high with roughly half of Canadians (47 to 49 per cent) providing a positive rating on promotion of knowledge, awareness and engagement, provision of information about available services, and overall performance. Finally, four in ten Canadians rate the performance of Veteran Affairs Canada in a positive way.

Performance of GoC

{Base: All Canadians; n=1000}

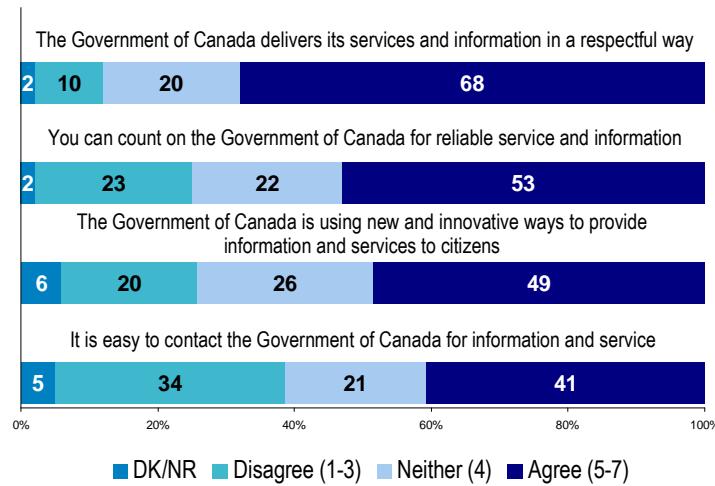

- Canadians who are highly supportive of the Government of Canada's role in raising interest in remembrance among Canadians also provide stronger ratings of government performance across the board.
- Allophones stand out in their positive rating of the overall performance of the Government of Canada, and their performance in providing information on available services. Ontarians have a more positive view than others regarding performance in promoting knowledge, awareness and engagement.
- Those more apt to rate Government performance in promoting knowledge, awareness and engagement and specifically the performance of Veterans Affairs Canada positively participated in Remembrance Day activities.

4.2 IMAGE OF THE GOVERNMENT OF CANADA

The image of the Government of Canada was also assessed, with largely positive results, based on agreement levels of four factors rated on a 7-point scale where 1 means totally disagree, 7 means totally agree and the mid-point, 4, means neither agree nor disagree. Fully two-thirds (68 per cent) of Canadians agree that the Government of Canada delivers its services and information in a respectful way. Roughly half agree that you can count on the Government of Canada for reliable service and information (53 per cent) and that the Government of Canada is using new and innovative ways to provide information and services to citizens (49 per cent). Finally, four in ten (41 per cent) agree with the image that it is easy to contact the Government of Canada for information and service (although one in three disagree with the ease of contact).

Image of Goc

"To what extent do you agree with the following statements?"

{Base: All Canadians; n=1000}

- As with views about performance, along with stronger support for the Government of Canada's role in raising interest in remembrance among Canadians, comes a more positive view of the Government on these dimensions.
- Canadians age 44 and under are more apt to agree that you can count on the Government of Canada for reliable service and information and that the Government of Canada is using new and innovative ways to provide information and services to citizens.

4.3 IMPACT ON REMEMBRANCE

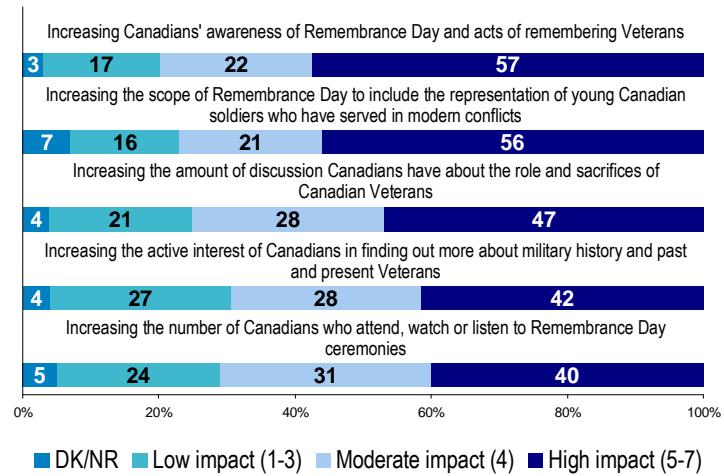

In addition to the performance and image statements evaluated earlier, the impact of the Government of Canada's involvement in remembrance was measured on five areas. The impact was rated on a 7-point scale where 1 means no impact at all, 7 means a very strong impact, and the mid-point 4 means a moderate impact.

The strongest impact was viewed to be in increasing Canadians' awareness of Remembrance Day and acts of remembering Veterans with 57 per cent agreement. This is followed closely by the impact of the Government of Canada's involvement in increasing the scope of Remembrance Day to include the representation of young Canadian soldiers who have served in modern conflicts. Just under half (47 per cent) of Canadians feel that a high impact has been achieved on increasing the amount of discussion Canadians have about the role and sacrifices of Canadian Veterans.

Increasing the active interest of Canadians in finding out more about military history and past and present Veterans followed with 42 per cent indicating that there has been a high impact in this area. At the same time, this factor also has the highest proportion of Canadians indicating that the Government of Canada's involvement has had a low impact (27 per cent) on Canadians finding out more about military history and Veterans. Finally, a high impact is viewed to have been achieved by 40 per cent of Canadians on the Government of Canada's role in increasing the number of Canadians who attend, watch or listen to Remembrance Day ceremonies.

Impact of GoC Involvement in Remembrance

"What impact Government of Canada involvement in remembrance has on...?"

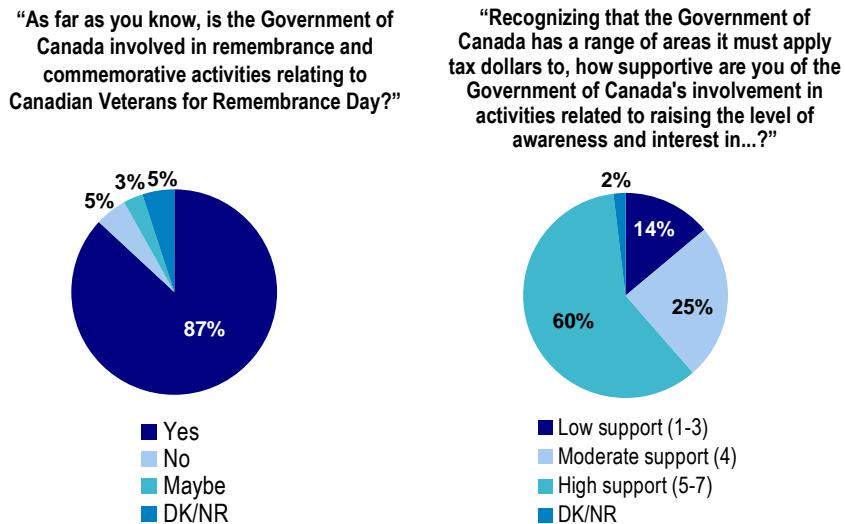

{Base: All Canadians; n=1000}

- The impact of the Government of Canada's activities in these areas was rated consistently higher by individuals who are supportive of the Government of Canada's role in these activities, those who know a Veteran, Remembrance Day participants.
- Perhaps more importantly in terms of impact of the advertisement, Canadians who remember a Remembrance Day advertisement (claimed/unprompted) and those who recognize the Lest We Forget vignette are also systematically more positive than those who did not recall or recognize the advertisement.

4.4 AWARENESS AND SUPPORT OF GOVERNMENT OF CANADA'S INVOLVEMENT

A very high proportion of Canadians (87 per cent) know that the Government of Canada is involved in remembrance and commemorative activities relating to Canadian Veterans, with an additional three per cent saying that they may know this. Perhaps even more impressive than this is that a majority of Canadians are supportive of this use of public funds, given that public dollars must typically be stretched to accommodate a range of issues and activities, often requiring that priorities be set. Respondents were asked to rate their support of the Government of Canada's involvement in activities related to raising the level of awareness and interest in remembrance among Canadians, recognizing that the Government of Canada has a range of areas it must apply tax dollars to. Overall, six in ten (60 per cent) Canadians indicated support for the Government of Canada's involvement in remembrance activities among Canadians. One-quarter are only moderately supportive, and another 14 per cent are not very supportive of Government of Canada involvement in remembrance activities.

Awareness and Support for GoC Involvement

{Base: All Canadians; n=1000}

- Men, Canadians with university education, and Anglophones are all more apt to know that the Government of Canada is involved in activities related to Canadian Veterans.
- Those who specifically recall the Lest We Forget vignette, as well as those who participated in Remembrance Day activities, are more often aware that the Government of Canada is involved with activities related to Canadian Veterans.

- › Albertans and Ontarians are the most supportive of the Government of Canada's involvement in Remembrance Day activities, whereas support is lowest in Quebec.
- › Canadians who know a Veteran, particularly those with a Veteran family member are the most supportive of the Government of Canada's involvement in activities to raise awareness.

4.5 OTHER ATTITUDES

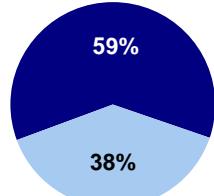

Nearly six in ten (59 per cent) believe that the involvement of Canadian soldiers and the sacrifices they have made should be remembered throughout the year, while the remaining four in ten (38 per cent) feel that a single big event is a good way to focus attention on Canadian Veterans and all that they have done.

A larger difference is seen in the view of Canadians regarding the focus of remembrance. Two-thirds (67 per cent) believe that the act of remembering should include all of those involved, including the family and friends of soldiers, as well as others involved in the conflict, compared to one-third (31 per cent) who feel that we should focus primarily on the soldiers themselves as they have had the most direct involvement and paid the largest price.

Other Key Attitudes

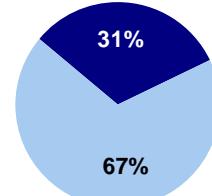

"Which of the following statements is closest to your own point of view?"

The involvement of Canadian soldiers and the sacrifices...

A single big event is a good way to focus attention on...

We should focus primarily on the soldiers themselves as...

The act of remembering should include all of those...

{Base: All Canadians; n=518/531}

- Quebecers have a greater propensity to focus primarily on the soldiers, and are also more apt to say that a single big event is a good way to focus attention on Canadian Veterans.
- Canadians who participated in Remembrance Day activities and those who know a Veteran more typically believe that the act of remembering should include the family and friends of soldiers, as well as others involved in the conflict.
- Those who are supportive of the Government of Canada's role in raising interest in remembrance among Canadians are more apt to feel that the involvement of Canadian soldiers and the sacrifices they have made should be remembered throughout the year.

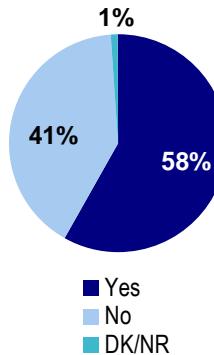

5. REMEMBRANCE DAY PARTICIPATION AND VETERAN ATTACHMENT

5.1 ATTENDANCE BEHAVIOUR

Nearly six in ten (58 per cent) Canadians have participated in Remembrance Day Activities this year. This participation can include personally attending, watching, or listening to any part of a Remembrance Day ceremony.

Attendance Behaviour

"Some people attend, watch or listen to Remembrance Day ceremonies, while others do not. Did you personally attend, watch or listen to any part of a Remembrance Day ceremony this year?"

{Base: All Canadians; n=1000}

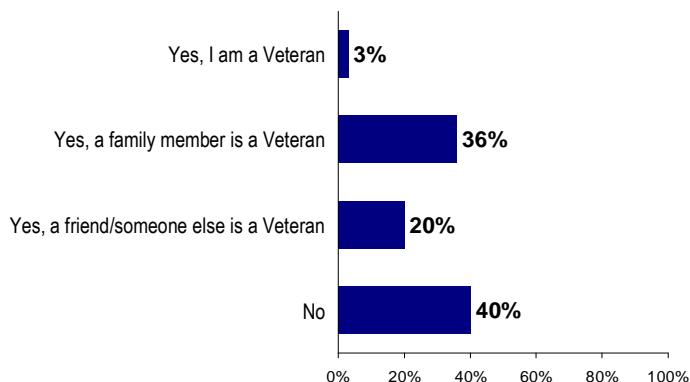

- Participation is highest in British Columbia and Alberta, and among English speaking Canadians in general, and lowest among Quebecers.
- Women and seniors are also more apt to have participated in a ceremony this year, as are Canadians who know a Veteran, and those who are supportive of the Government of Canada's involvement in activities related to interest in remembrance.

5.2 VETERAN INCIDENCE

The survey captures an incidence of three per cent who are a Canadian Veteran. A further 36 per cent reported a family member who is a Veteran, and 20 per cent who know a friend or someone else who is a Canadian Veteran. Four in ten Canadians do not personally know a Veteran.

Incidence of Knowing/Being a Veteran

“Are you a Canadian Veteran, or do you personally know a Canadian Veteran? If so...what is your relation to the Canadian Veteran?”

{Base: All Canadians; n=1000}

- The highest incidence of reported family members who are Veterans is in Atlantic Canada, followed by Saskatchewan and Manitoba. It is lowest in Quebec.

I would now like to ask you some questions about some specific advertising. Do you remember seeing an ad on the television over the past few weeks?

The ad displays a series of images set to piano music including black-and-white shots of soldiers from the World War One and Two eras, images of climbing out of trenches, and battles. There is also a close-up of a traditional looking nurse and an image of a modern female soldier holding a baby. The ad ends with a soldier saluting and a Canadian flag at a grave stone. The tagline for the ad is Lest We Forget which appears at the end.

Voici maintenant des questions sur des publicités particulières. Vous souvenez-vous d'avoir vu une annonce à la télévision ces dernières semaines?

Elle montre une série d'images sur fond de musique de piano, dont des instantanés en noir et blanc de soldats à l'époque de la première et de la seconde guerres mondiales, des soldats qui sortent des tranchées et qui sont en train de livrer bataille. Il y a aussi en gros plan une infirmière d'allure traditionnelle et une soldate des temps modernes qui tient un bébé dans ses bras. La dernière image est celle d'un soldat qui salue et d'un drapeau canadien à côté d'une pierre tombale. Le titre d'appel de cette annonce est N'oublions jamais qui apparaît à la toute fin.

Lequel des énoncés suivants se rapproche le plus de votre opinion?

Il faut se concentrer avant tout sur les soldats eux-mêmes parce que ce sont eux qui ont été engagés le plus directement et qui en ont le plus payé le prix.	1
La commémoration doit englober tous les intéressés, y compris la famille et les amis des soldats de même que tous ceux qui ont participé aux conflits.	2
